Notes

This is rare except in the vicinity of Prae Wood, where there are many examples in the features belonging to Wheeler's groups B, C, and D, C.AD5-50. It must have been made there; it is one of the commonest forms, and only a few are included here. A certain typological development is visible from the group A specimen and those at the bottom of the enclosure A ditch to the large globular examples in the later deposits; these have a more Roman than native appearance.
